Funny. We don't look Catholic.
FATHER J. O'BRIEN
We're perplexing a lot of people.
After all, what does a Loyola education have to do with television?
Or film-making, or advertising? Or the amplified culture of the Beatles and Joan Baez?
Nothing except education. Loyola's Communications Department is as traditional as its Science and Arts courses: we believe a good Catholic education has to be catholic.
Our faculty consists of men and women of all major creeds—and priests too—all with a common purpose—awareness.
Now we must expand. We need new buildings, new equipment, new facilities. Please help us. Five dollars. Or five thousand. Or whatever you can give.
